A Recent Acquisition: 1913 Sears Catalog

In the first half of the twentieth century, logging and livestock were booming in Duvall, and the workers relied on tools for part of the hard work. But where did they get the tools?

In previous Wagon Wheels we described the many local hardware stores that supplied the Snoqualmie Valley with some of its equipment (see the December 2012 Wagon Wheel). But also going strong at that time was Sears, a store that most of us are familiar with today.

Recently, Thomas Matthiesen donated an original copy of a 1913 Sears Catalog to the Historical Society. It's in great shape, and flipping through the slightly faded pages you'll find an assortment of goods and tools, including those used in the livestock and dairy industries in the early 1900's. Thanks, Thomas, for your donation.

Displayed on the cover of the Sears catalog was the guarantee that “any article purchased from us will satisfy you perfectly”.

An Upcoming Community Event

Meet Michael Schein,
Author of

Bones Beneath Our Feet: the Puget Sound Indian Wars of 1855-1856

Local author Michael Schein of Stillwater / Lake Marcel will give a talk illustrated with a historical slide show, entitled Bones Beneath Our Feet: the Puget Sound Indian Wars of 1855-1856. This talk will be May 25th at 2:00pm in the new Duvall library, and is sponsored by Humanities Washington and the King County Library. Michael's talk will focus on the period from 1844-1858, from the first American settlement in Puget Sound to the execution of Chief Leschi, leader of the Natives in the war of 1855-56, and includes the role of Chief Patkanim of the Snoqualmies. This is a story of extremes: great courage, cultural misunderstanding, interracial love, heroism, and cruelty. Topics include the Simmons-Bush party's arrival; growing tensions between the Bostons, the King George Men, and the Natives; the Treaty of Medicine Creek and other treaties made by Territorial Governor Stevens; causes of the Puget Sound Indian War; the White River Massacre; Martial Law in Washington Territory; and the trial and execution of Chief Leschi.

On Display at the DVCC!

Denny Redman has graciously loaned a collection of old signs to the Duvall Historical Society for display at the Duvall Visitor and Centennial Center (DVCC). They are currently hanging in the DVCC, and will be there through the month of April.

Most of the old signs were found at the used bookstore on Main Street in Duvall, which used to be MacDougal's (right next to the DVCC). Similar to a general store, MacDougal's was a grocery store with some hardware. As the signs' accompanying description says, "Back in the 1950's, MacDougal's sold items such as Japanese-made battery operated toys, like The Space Cruiser, which looked kind of like a Buick with holes in the side. Mac was a wonderful, soft-spoken man with lots of friends."

Stop by the Duvall Visitor and Centennial Center this month to see the old advertising signs on display.

As Denny pointed out, this sign says that "2 hot cakes & 2 eggs" cost 10 cents more than "3 hot cakes & eggs". Any guesses why? (I don't know, do you?)

According to Tove Burhen, the slogan "Call for Philip Morris" was an advertising jingle used to sell the cigarettes. In the 1930's, a high-voiced 4-foot tall New York City bellhop named Johnny Roventini was recruited to belt out the line as if he were in a hotel lobby paging an actual person named Philip Morris (who of course never responded). For twenty years his jingle was heard on the radio, and in the early 1950's Johnny was often seen on "I Love Lucy", a show that was sponsored by Philip Morris. See the sign at the DVCC. That's Johnny in the upper left corner.
