Another Great Year of the Duvall Heritage Festival

The 2014 Duvall Heritage Festival was once again a huge success! On Saturday, September 27th, roughly 600 young people and people-young-at-heart traveled back in time to participate in pioneer living via hands-on demonstrations and activities. Many plein-air artists also took advantage of the great weather and beautiful surroundings by setting up shop on the Dougherty Farmstead grounds and painting the day away.

Special thank you's go to all who participated in the day: The musicians (the Bob Antone family, the Poindexters, Tinker's Dram, and Stillwater Hill), the community booths who shared information about their programs and provided activities for attendees to take part in (KCLS, Northwest Art Center, Food Forest, SnoValley Tilth, and the Wilderness Awareness School), the Galusha family who provided personnel and equipment, and to Suzi Freeman who selflessly donated her time and corn-husk-doll-making expertise.

We also couldn't have had such a successful event without Diane Baker and the quilt show exhibitors who helped draw a big crowd to Duvall and arranged for the shuttle between the Dougherty Farmstead and Main Street, the Holy Innocents Catholic Church who provided the parking, and the City of Duvall Public Works Department who implemented the practical aspects of the event. This year there was also great food from Whitey's BBQ.

Last but not least, a huge THANK YOU goes out to all of the volunteers. From the organizers (Mary Lampson, Kimberly Engelkes, Alana McCoy, Connie Zimmerman, and the Duvall Cultural Commission), to everyone else who donated their time and energy to the day – it took a village to make this great community event happen.

A New Logging Exhibit at the Dougherty Farmstead

The Duvall Historical Society has been busy with a new interpretative display at the Dougherty Farmstead museum. On August 31st, a volunteer work party installed a logging exhibit that describes the day in the life of a logger, logging transportation around Duvall, the Duvall shingle mill, loggers' tools, and loggers' work clothes. Descriptive signage accompanies the tool display. Thank you to the volunteers who made this exhibit happen: Tom Norenberg, Kimberly Engelkes, Mary and Dennis Lampson, and Connie Zimmerman. During fall, winter, and spring months the Dougherty Farmstead museum is open by appointment for group tours.

A Call for Ideas: What Would You Like to Know?

The Duvall Historical Society has received great feedback on community presentations held throughout the year. Recent topics have included a history of Cherry Valley Village (the village that became Duvall), a walk back in time as we revisited the Silver Spoon Café (a former Duvall favorite meeting spot and café), and the history of the Snoqualmie Valley meat industry.

We recently made the decision to increase the number of guest presentations held throughout the year, and we'd like to present topics that are of interest to you.

So – what would you like to know more about? Please email us your ideas at webmaster@duvallhistoricalsociety.org.
