A Recap of the 2015 Duvall Heritage Festival

Roughly 450 visitors flocked to the Dougherty Farmstead for the 2015 Duvall Heritage Festival. Presented by the Duvall Historical Society and the Duvall Cultural Commission, the event took place on Saturday, September 26th, as musicians, community organizations, and artisans gathered with guests to revisit the past. They washed clothes the old fashioned way, sawed logs, spun wool, toured tractors, turned quilts, tasted honey, walked through the farmstead, listened to toe-tapping tunes, and more. We thank all who volunteered, attended, and worked hard to make the event happen. We look forward to another great event next year!

Historic Happenings in Duvall

Dougherty Farmstead School Tours

On October 8th, 2015, Duvall Historical Society members Kimberly Engelkes, Tom Norenberg, and Mary Lampson, led a group of about 70 Eagle Rock elementary school children and their chaperones on a tour of the Dougherty Farmstead. The tour was a part of their study of "Duvall, Then and Now". Guides and students all had a wonderful time.

To schedule a Farmstead tour for your school or group, contact us at webmaster@duvallhistoricalsociety.org.

A New Porch for the Dougherty House

Thank you to the city of Duvall for replacing the front porch of the Dougherty House. It was rotting and now looks wonderful and feels safe.

LDS Church Members Volunteer to Clean Up Duvall's Historic Sites

September 12th, 2015, was a day of service for the LDS Church, and both the Duvall and Big Rock Wards took the opportunity to help the city of Duvall clean up historic sites. 50 members from the LDS Big Rock Ward volunteered a total of 140 hours, and worked to clean, paint, mow, and remove vegetation at the Dougherty Farmstead. The Duvall Ward gave their time to tidy up the Depot Park and Depot building. They scraped and painted the Depot deck and skirting, as well as cleared vegetation from the park. What wonderful help from both Wards and so appreciated. Thank you.

Announcing this Year's Historical Society Holiday Ornament

This year's Duvall Historical Society holiday ornament will bear the image of the Thayer Barn and can be purchased at Duvall's tree lighting festival, at the Duvall Historical Society, and at participating community retailers. Past years' ornaments can also be purchased from the Historical Society. Contact us at webmaster@duvallhistoricalsociety.org for more information and begin to collect your ornaments today.

The Big Thayer Barn By Ruth Bellamy

The Thayer Family, which consisted of Frank, Lottie, Lela, Nellie, and Otis, made the long trip from Paxton, Nebraska, in 1902. They made their home on the Snoqualmie River north of Cherry Valley (near present day Duvall). Frank farmed, milked cows and raised grain and hay. The family carried water from the river in buckets. For a while, the post office was moved from Lucius Day's home to their farm.

After a couple of years a different farm became available south of Cherry Valley (Duvall). The place consisted of a one room house, hog shed, small barn, and orchard. Frank Thayer engaged a pair of loggers to clear the upper part. Frank Thayer soon added two more rooms to the house as his growing family was feeling cramped. Son Elmer was born in the three-room house. In 1908, Frank built a big new house just up the hill. Another son, Raymond, was born in this new house. The house was furnished with a load of furniture ordered from Montgomery Ward & Co. and delivered by horse and buggy from Monroe.

Once land was cleared the Thayers raised hay to feed their small herd of Jersey and Guernsey milk cows. Milk was separated, with some of the cream made into butter for the family. Milk that remained after being separated was either fed to the pigs or made into cottage cheese.

Lottie Thayer died during the Flu Epidemic in 1926. Frank Thayer received money from the railroad for a right-a-way through the property. After Lottie's death, Frank Thayer moved to Oregon.

The big Thayer barn was built in the 1930's. Otis Thayer and his first wife, Betty, farmed using the big Thayer barn west of highway 203 and the big house. They had two children, Hobert and Richard. Otis and Betty had 25 to 30 Jersey and CI Guernsey cows. Their milk was shipped to Seattle in ten-gallon cans and later in refrigerated tanks by truck. Otis' first wife, Betty, passed away about 1945.

Nellie Thayer's daughter and Otis' niece then served as a homemaker for Otis. During this time members of Methodist Youth Fellowship visited and held several meetings and party times in the big house. Otis married his second wife Emma, who helped on the farm and washed up the milk house utensils – her daily chore. George Taylor milked cows for Otis.

When the power went off several hours, come milking time, Otis would collect neighbor men to help hand-milk the cows. The cows couldn't wait. Usually there was a large generator providing cooling for the milk. Power outages could last for 12-18 hours.

Otis had a great garden and was heard to say, "I never had a weed in my garden!"

A second house was built in 1969 after the sale of the big house and five acres to another family. This house was built on the West side of Highway 203 beside the big Thayer Barn. Otis and Emma lived in this new house. Otis passed away in 1984, and Emma lived there until her death.

There was little farming of the land after 1968. It was rented to local farmers for a time. William and Helen Losleben were the family that had bought the big historic house and five acres on the East Side of highway 203, in June of 1969. They improved the house and small early barn on the property. They raised and fed calves for veal, with their family's help. They successfully held a bed and breakfast service for several years. Bill and Helen were on the property for 42 years.

In 2011 a new owner, Mike Chapman, bought the house and five acres. The big Thayer Barn has sat idle since 1969. Duvall Foundation for the Arts currently plans to develop a Community Arts Center there. The barn has been listed on the Endangered Historic Properties list.
